MEMORANDUM OF DECISION ON MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Date: October 20, 2005

Time: 2:00 p.m.

Place: Courtroom 302

v.

Rodolfo Charles Demordaigle,
Defendant.

Background

On June 16, 1998, Plaintiffs filed their First Amended Complaint against Debtor in state court for Sexual Battery and Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress. The allegations in the complaint were based Debtor's molestation of Plaintiffs while they were junior high school students. Debtor was their teacher. At the time the civil complaint was filed, Debtor was already serving a prison sentence based on his child molestation of Plaintiffs. Notwithstanding C.C.P. § 425.10, the First Amended

1 Complaint sought general damages in excess of $25,000, according to proof, and for 2 punitive damages in the sum of $50,000,000. The Summons and First Amended 3 Complaint were served upon Debtor in prison, and there is no dispute that he actually 4 received them.

5 Debtor failed to appear for trial. In an attempt to comply with C.C.P. § 425.11, 6 on April 3, 2001, Plaintiffs served by mail a Notice of Damages Sought, advising Debtor
7 that Plaintiffs sought damages in the amount of $1.4 million each. On October 29, 8 2001, the state court, finding that Debtor had "been regularly served with process," 9 entered default judgment against him.

10 Plaintiffs proceeded to collect on Debtor's assets. Plaintiffs believed that Debtor 11 was fraudulently transferring his assets into a trust and turning them over to one of his 12 former students, who has continued to live in Debtor's house since 1997. Plaintiffs filed 13 suit to void these transfers and to get a judgment against the student to recoup these 14 funds. Just two days before this case was to go to trial, Debtor filed chapter 7 15 bankruptcy.

16 On June 2, 2005, Plaintiffs filed their Complaint to determine debts and liabilities
17 nondischargeable under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6). The two debts Plaintiffs pray this Court 18 to order nondischargeable are these two state court default judgments in the amounts 19 of $1.4 million and $750,000, respectively. The relevant underlying state court causes 20 of action were for Sexual Battery and Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress, both 21 arising from Defendant's acts of child molestation against his junior high school 22 students. Plaintiffs filed this Motion for Summary Judgment on September 13, 2005.

23 Summary

24 Summary judgment is appropriate when, "viewing [the] evidence in the light most 25 favorable to the nonmoving party, there are no genuine issues of material fact" 26 Hamilton v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 270 F.3d 778, 782 (9th Cir. 2001).

1 Plaintiffs assert they are entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law since 2 the state court default judgment operates as a collateral estoppel and requires the entry
3 of a nondischargeable judgment against Debtor under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6). Debtor's 4 sole defense is that the default judgment was entered in error under C.C.P. § 425.11.

5 Analysis

6 Child molestation qualifies as "willful and malicious injury by the debtor to another 7 entity" under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6). As the state court judgment was rendered solely 8 based on such willful and malicious injury, it qualifies as a nondischargeable debt under 9 this section so long as collateral estoppel applies.

10 Collateral estoppel applies in this case. The five threshold elements for collateral 11 estoppel have all been met. See In re Baldwin, 249 F.3d 912, 917-18 (9th Cir. 2001).
12 The fact that the state court judgment was a default judgment does not present an 13 obstacle in this case to the application of collateral estoppel. Id. at 919. It is clear from 14 the underlying complaint that the default judgment was based solely on allegations in the 15 complaint giving rise to nondischargeability under Section 523(a)(6).

16 I. Collateral Attack

17 Debtor's sole defense is that the state court judgment is unenforceable because 18 the default judgment is void. Debtor is seeking to collaterally attack the default judgment 19 based on the Plaintiffs' failure to comply with C.C.P. § 425.11. In certain circumstances, 20 such as those present in this case, a default judgment may be subject to collateral attack
21 in the bankruptcy court. See In re Lake, 202 B.R. 751, 758 (9th Cir. B.A.P. 1996); In re 22 Warn, 258 B.R. 238, 240 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 2001).

23 Debtor asserts that the default judgment is void because there was no personal 24 or substitute service of the C.C.P. § 425.11 "Statement of Damages Being Sought." The 25 Statement was served by mail only. Debtor contends that failure to serve the Statement 26 in the manner of a summons is a violation of his due process rights.
27

1 While it is true that C.C.P. § 425.11 provides that a non-appearing defendant
2 must be served with a Statement of Damages Being Sought in the same manner as a 3 summons before a default may be taken, that is, by personal or substitute service, see 4 C.C.P. § 415.20(b), nowhere is it mentioned in the statute what the consequences are if 5 the Statement of Damages Being Sought is served otherwise, such as by mail, and 6 default judgment is still entered. California case law has filled this gap.

7 In Schwab v. Rondel Homes, Inc., 53 Cal.3d 428 (Cal. 1991), the California
8 Supreme Court held that a default judgment should not be "entered against defendants 9 without proper notice to them of the amount of damages sought. A defendant is entitled 10 to actual notice of the liability to which he or she may be subjected, a reasonable period 11 of time before default may be entered." Id. at 435. California Novelties, Inc. v. Sokoloff, 12 6 Cal. App. 4th 936 (Cal. App. 1992), interpreting the standard set forth in Schwab, held 13 that service by mail of the Statement of Damages Sought met the minimum standards of 14 due process. Id. at 945. Accordingly, the court upheld the default judgment. See also 15 In re Warn, 258 B.R. 238, 240 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 2001) (upholding default judgment on 16 similar grounds and applying collateral estoppel). Schwab and California Novelties 17 supersede all contrary prior case law cited by Debtor.

19 California Novelties presents the appropriate analysis. That case held that "there 20 is no hard and fast rule regarding the precise method or timing of service of the section 21 425.11 statement of damages. Rather, we are to determine in each case whether 22 minimum standards of due process have been met." 6 Cal. App. 4th at 945. "Neither 23 expressly nor by implication does Schwab equate actual notice with personal service of 24 a statement of damages under Code of Civil Procedure section 425.11." Id. at 944.

25 II. Due Process Analysis

26 To fully analyze the due process issue, it is first necessary to understand why the 27 C.C.P. § 425.11 "Statement of Damages Sought" is required by the statute. "[T]he clear 28

1 import thereof is to give defendant one 'last clear chance' to respond to the allegations 2 of the complaint and to avoid the precise consequences which have obtained here: a 3 judgment for a substantial sum, well after the time for relief from default has passed . . .
4 [without] any actual notice of her potential liability." Stevenson v. Turner, 94 Cal. App.
5 3d 315, 319-20 (Cal. App. 1979). Notice of damages sought is essential to the validity of 6 a default judgment. "Code of Civil Procedure, section 580 declares: 'The relief granted 7 to the plaintiff, if there be no answer, cannot exceed that which he shall have demanded 8 in his complaint * * *.' The statutory theory is that a defaulting defendant must be given 9 notice of the maximum relief sought in the action, otherwise he is deprived of his day in 10 court. When a court gives greater relief against a defaulting defendant than that 11 demanded by the prayer of the complaint, it is acting to that extent in excess of its 12 jurisdiction, and the judgment is to that extent void." Nemeth v. Trumbull, 220 13 Cal.App.2d 788, 790-91 (Cal. App. 1963).

14 The importance of personal or substitute service was described in Englebreton & 15 Co., Inc. v. Harrison, 125 Cal. App. 3d 436 (Cal. App. 1982). While this case was in the 16 context of serving an amended complaint on a non-appearing party, courts interpreting 17 the requirements of C.C.P. § 425.11 have found that its rationale applies by analogy.
18 See, e.g., Plotitsa v. Superior Ct., 140 Cal. App. 3d 755, 759 (Cal. App. 1983).

20 If the amended complaint is merely served by mail, the defendant may assume 21 the papers thus received only catalog the procedural steps taken by the plaintiff to 22 obtain a default judgment on the original complaint and the defendant may fail to 23 examine them with the care they deserve. Also, of course, documents sent by 24 ordinary mail may go astray. They may never be delivered at all, or may be 25 delivered to the wrong address, or delivered and then lost by an employee at the 26 defendant's office or by another resident at the defendant's home. In all such 27 instances, the defendant's failure to receive the documents will not soon be 28 discovered by the defendant or by the court if the defendant has decided not to appear in the action. Service of the amended complaint in the manner provided for service of summons is much more likely to result in actual notice to the defendant that something has occurred requiring reassessment of the decision not to contest the action.

1 Englebreton, 125 Cal. App. 3d at 442-43.

2 Having addressed the purpose of the C.C.P. § 425.11 "Statement of Damages 3 Sought," the question is whether due process was satisfied in the instant case. Both 4 California Novelties and Warn are highly persuasive authority that service by mail of the 5 C.C.P. § 425.11 "Statement of Damages Sought" does not, in and of itself, render a 6 default judgment based thereon void. However, the question of whether due process 7 was satisfied in this case must be appropriate for adjudication on a motion for summary 8 judgment.

9 The case of Uva v. Evans, 83 Cal.App.3d 356 (Cal. App. 1978) controls on that 10 question. In Uva, the plaintiff in a dog bite case filed a complaint which stated damages 11 in the amount of $30,000. Doing so violated C.C.P. § 425.10(b), which prohibits 12 personal injury complaints from stating the amount of actual and punitive damages 13 sought. After the defendant failed to appear in the case, the plaintiff served by mail a 14 request to enter default and a request to enter judgment on defendant, again stating 15 damages in the amount of $30,000. No separate C.C.P. § 425 Statement of Damages 16 Sought, denominated as such, was mailed. Notwithstanding this patent failure to comply 17 with the requirements of C.C.P. § 425.11, the court held that the default judgment did 18 not deny the defendant's right to due process. "Right or wrong, the complaint filed and 19 served herein did contain a recitation of the damages sought and the judgment did not 20 exceed the amount requested. . . . Moreover, the amount of damages sought was 21 contained in every piece of paper which plaintiff served on defendant; thus defendant 22 suffered no conceivable prejudice from the procedure followed here. . . . Defendant had 23 ample time to respond had he so desired." Id. at 360-61. Uva noted anecdotally that 24 defendant "has given us no reason to suppose that an additional notice of damages 25 would have been any more successful in prodding him to respond." Id. at 361 n.4.

26
27
28

1 Uva is completely on point. As in Uva, the Plaintiffs in this case failed to comply 2 with C.C.P. § 425.10 and, instead, stated general damages in excess of $25,000, 3 according to proof, and punitive damages in the sum of $50 million. The Summons and 4 First Amended Complaint were served upon Debtor by substitute service, and Debtor 5 acknowledges receipt. Also, as in Uva, additional documents were served by mail on 6 Debtor, also stating the amount of damages sought.

7 Because Debtor had sufficient notice of his potential liability, the default judgment 8 in this case is not void. Right or wrong, one way or another Debtor received actual 9 notice of his potential liability in the state court action, and the default judgment did not 10 exceed the amount requested. In point of fact, the default judgment was substantially 11 smaller than the $50 million requested in the First Amended Complaint. Thus, Debtor 12 could have suffered no conceivable prejudice from the procedure followed here. Debtor 13 had ample time to respond if he so desired. As in Uva, Debtor has given no reason to 14 suppose that personal or substitute service of the C.C.P. § 425.11 "Statement of 15 Damages Sought" would have been any more successful in prodding him to respond 16 than a complaint seeking $50 million.

17 This conclusion is bolstered by the language of C.C.P. § 475, which states, in 18 pertinent part, that "[t]he court must, in every stage of an action, disregard any error, 19 improper ruling, instruction, or defect, in the pleadings or proceedings which, in the 20 opinion of said court, does not affect the substantial rights of the parties." As the 21 substantial rights of the parties are unaffected, any error must be disregarded.

22 As the default judgment is valid and enforceable, Debtor's due process challenge 23 lacks merit. As the default judgment is not void on its face, Debtor's challenge to the 24 judgment is untimely under C.C.P. §§ 473 and 473.5. See California Novelties, 6 Cal.
25 App. 4th 936, 940 n.2 (Cal. App. 1992).

1 III. Lack of Genuine Issues of Material Fact

2 Debtor asserts that he "was not served with and did not receive a Notice of 3 Damages sought (statement of damages). Prior to the entry of the default judgment the 4 debtor did not have notice and was unaware of the amount or nature of the damages
5 sought against him in the action." Under Uva, this allegation does not create a genuine 6 issue of material fact. As noted above, Debtor agreed that he was properly served with 7 the First Amended Complaint in his Response to Statement of Material Facts. Debtor's 8 counsel also agreed to this point at oral argument.

9 Even if a genuine issue of material fact were relevant to whether Debtor received 10 actual notice from the C.C.P. § 425.11 "Statement of Damages Sought," Debtor has not 11 presented any admissible evidence to create such a genuine issue. "A trial court can [] 12 consider [only] admissible evidence in ruling on a motion for summary judgment." Orr v.
13 Bank of Am., 285 F.3d 764, 773 (9th Cir. 2002) (upholding summary judgment against a 14 party who presented unauthenticated and hearsay evidence in opposition to the motion).

15 Debtor's Response to Each of the Material Facts Contended by Movant is 16 unsubstantiated by admissible evidence.¹ In this Response, Debtor agrees that default 17 judgment was entered, agrees that this judgment rests on the First Amended Complaint, 18 and agrees that Debtor was served with the Summons and First Amended Complaint.
19 The Debtor, however, disagrees that he was served with a Request for Entry of Default 20 and a Notice of Damages Sought and that he received and sent letters to Plaintiff's 21 counsel in 2003. Even though there is a space for it and even though Plaintiffs did so, 22 Debtor does not list any evidence in this document to support these positions.

23 What little evidence Debtor tries to admit can be found in the Declaration of 24 Kenneth J. Miele. In this declaration, Debtor's counsel states, in pertinent part:
25
26

27 ¹ In addition, this document was late filed under L.B.R. 9013-1(e).
28

1 I make this declaration because of the unavailability of the debtor due to his 2 imprisonment and upon personal knowledge based upon my representation of the 3 debtor, telephonic communications, discussions and interviews with the debtor. . .
4 . I have personally and specifically discussed with the Debtor whether or not he 5 ever received a statement of damages or notice of damages sought and whether 6 he was ever aware of the amount of damages the plaintiff sought against him.
7 The debtor was not served with a Notice of Damages Sought (Statement of 8 Damages) and never received a 'Notice of Statement of Damages Sought'.² Prior 9 to the entry of the default judgment the debtor was not aware of the amount of the 10 damages sought against him in the action.

11 These statements are clearly inadmissible hearsay under F.R.E. 801(c), and may not be 12 considered on a motion for summary judgment.

13 Even if the statements were not hearsay, they are conclusory. Debtor's counsel 14 never declares that Debtor specifically told him any of these things. The declaration 15 merely states that there have been discussions and then Debtor's counsel states his 16 own conclusion. This, too, is insufficient evidence on a motion for summary judgment.

17 If Debtor had additional evidence he wished to present on this motion, he should 18 have filed a F.R.C.P. 56(f) motion.³ However, he never did so. Rule 56(f) provides that 19 "[s]hould it appear from the affidavits of a party opposing the motion that the party 20 cannot for reasons stated present by affidavit facts essential to justify the party's 21 opposition, the court may refuse the application for judgment or may order a 22 continuance to permit affidavits to be obtained or depositions to be taken or discovery to 23 be had or may make such other order as is just." "References in memoranda and 24 declarations to a need for discovery do not qualify as motions under Rule 56(f). Rule 25 56(f) requires affidavits setting forth the particular facts expected from the movant's 26 discovery. Failure to comply with the requirements of Rule 56(f) is a proper ground for 27 ² The declaration also states that the "complaint does not state the specific 28 amount of damages sought," however this is clearly untrue. As noted above, the complaint seeks $50 million in damages. Only approximately $3 million was sought at a later stage of this proceeding.

³ F.R.B.P. 7056 incorporates F.R.C.P. 56 by reference.

1 denying discovery and proceeding to summary judgment." Brae Transp., Inc. v.
2 Coopers & Lybrand, 790 F.2d 1439, 1443 (9th Cir. 1986).

3 Debtor's counsel's inferences in his declaration that he was unable to timely get a 4 declaration from his client is insufficient under F.R.C.P. 56(f). Debtor was able to sign 5 his voluntary chapter 7 bankruptcy petition, demonstrating his ability to review and sign 6 legal documents, notwithstanding his incarceration. Debtor's counsel represented his 7 ability to travel to the prison personally to accomplish this task as well. At oral argument, 8 Debtor's counsel attempted to offer a declaration and various documents to supplement 9 his response to this motion, stating that he only recently was able to visit his client in 10 prison. Plaintiffs' counsel was surprised with these items only minutes before the 11 hearing began and argued that he had other correspondence demonstrating that the 12 proffered declaration was untrue. It is precisely this type of unfair surprise and 13 gameplaying that Rule 56(f) seeks to avoid. This motion was discussed as early as two 14 months earlier in a status conference and was filed timely with more than adequate time 15 for Debtor to respond. Counsel could have sought a continuance if he was having 16 difficulty getting his client's declaration, but did not. The last minute submission of such 17 documents does not qualify as grounds to deny or delay this motion.

18 19 Conclusion

20 In conclusion, the default judgment is not void for lack of due process, and there 21 are no genuine issues of material fact. Summary judgment is appropriate at this stage.
22 Accordingly, judgment will be entered in favor of Plaintiffs.
